With Labor Day under two weeks away, the end of summer is officially on the horizon. But, don't worry, procrastinators, that's still plenty of time to plan one last hurrah.

Whether you're looking for a day trip or an international jaunt, here are 5 places to send off the season if you're traveling from around New York City.

The Quintessential Summer Getaway: Westerly, Rhode Island

While Newport, with its gilded mansions and manicured lawns, is the most famous (and flashiest) summertime destination in Rhode Island, those seeking a lower-key getaway should consider Westerly and its quaint charms. The place to stay is the Weekapaug Inn, a 19th Cape-Cod style resort nestled between Quonochontaug Pond and the Atlantic Ocean. Indulge in classic summertime pursuits: paddleboarding, sailing Hobie Caps, and of course, spending a day at the beach.
